BUILDING TRUST AND DEMAND IN DAIRY

01 | NEW DIETARY GUIDELINES SUPPORT DAIRY

The U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services recently released the 2020-2025 Dietary Guidelines for Americans (DGA), the cornerstone of official guidance on dietary recommendations for federal food assistance programs, like those followed in our nation's schools.

National Dairy Council (NDC), the nutrition research and education arm of the dairy checkoff, plays an important role in maintaining dairy's place in the Dietary Guidelines. On behalf of dairy farmers, NDC funds hundreds of research studies on topics including dairy and type 2 diabetes, cardiovascular disease, whole milk dairy foods, inflammation, protein, digestive health, sustainable food systems, child nutrition, bone health and more. NDC staff also participate in the DGA public process by submitting written comments and oral testimony that summarize the scientific evidence on dairy's role in healthy diets. Key dairy highlights from the Dietary Guidelines include:

DAIRY REMAINS ITS OWN FOOD GROUP

The dairy group includes low fat and fat free milk, cheese and yogurt as well as lactose-free versions and fortified soy beverage and soy yogurt - but no other plant-based alternatives.

THREE SERVINGS STILL RECOMMENDED

For those 9 years and older, 3 servings of dairy foods are recommended in the Healthy U.S. Style and Healthy Vegetarian Dietary Patterns.

DAIRY RECOMMENDED FOR AGES 6-23 MONTHS

For the first time, guidelines are provided for toddlers ages 12-23 months who no longer consume human milk or infant formula, which include 1.5 to 2 servings of dairy foods per day. Dairy foods recommended for toddlers include whole milk, reduced-fat plain yogurt and reduced-fat cheese. Yogurt and cheese are also recommended as complementary foods for infants starting at around 6 months of age.

02 | DAIRY RECIPES PROMOTED BY OHIO STATE ATHLETICS

This basketball season, the American Dairy Association Mideast teamed up with Ohio State Athletics to bring Buckeye fans the “perfect dunk.” Each Sunday, the Buckeyes recapped the number of dunks from the men’s basketball team by posting a “dunk-o-meter” on their Facebook and Twitter pages. These posts encouraged fans to add to the tally by dunking their own cracker or veggie into a featured dairy dip found on Drink-Milk.com.

More than 2.5 million people follow Ohio State Athletics on their Facebook and Twitter pages, which helps extend the dairy checkoff’s reach and promote delicious dairy-friendly recipes. The 6-week social media campaign, which is part of ADA Mideast’s ongoing partnership with Ohio State Athletics, continued through March 14th.

03 | NEW LEADERSHIP & RECORD YEAR FOR USDEC

Krysta Harden was recently named the President and CEO of the U.S. Dairy Export Council (USDEC).

Harden succeeds former President and CEO Tom Vilsack, who has been confirmed as secretary of agriculture in the Biden administration.

In her new role, Harden will direct a staff of dairy trade specialists, trade policy professionals, a global marketing team, a strategy, and insights team, and oversee eight international offices working to facilitate dairy product and ingredient application knowledge, identify market opportunities, monitor regulatory activity and work toward improving the business climate for U.S. dairy.

2020 WAS A RECORD YEAR

In 2020, the U.S. dairy industry exported more than 2 million tons of milk solids for the first time ever! That milestone means more U.S. milk is being shipped across our borders than ever before, in part due to the work of USDEC.

The checkoff-funded USDEC works with processors, trading companies and others to enhance global demand and market access for U.S. dairy products and ingredients on behalf of U.S. dairy farmers.

06 | PROMOTING DAIRY SCIENCE

To reinforce dairy's nutritional benefits, the American Dairy Association Midwest works with those who influence others about healthy eating, like registered dietitians, school nutrition directors, pediatricians and school nurses, so that they become advocates for dairy and recommend milk, cheese and yogurt as part of a healthy diet.

One way ADA Midwest reaches these influencers is by placing advertisements in state health professional association journals, such as FamilyDoc and The Family Physician, the official magazines of West Virginia and Ohio chapters of the American Academy of Family Physicians and Ohio Pediatrics, the premiere magazine of the Ohio chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The ads, which reach more than 13,000 doctors several times a year, highlight a variety of topics including research supporting dairy's health benefits, dairy's role in disease prevention and available resources from ADA Midwest.
